The word "Go," was given, and away they went around the track, Lamp Girl and Stella keeping abreast until the first half mile was finished. Then Lamp Girl, who was slightly ahead, made a break, and Stella shot a full length ahead of her. The gap was closing up again, when Lamp Girl made a second break on the quarter stretch, and Stella shot under the wire two or three lengths ahead. The crowd went wild with excitement. Men rushed out on the track, and taking George Walker, Stella's driver, in their arms, carried him about amid the shouts of the spectators. Citella had won three of the five heats, the last being made in 2 minutes and 20 seconds, and that, too, on a dry, sandy track, Lamp Girl won second money and W. T. ames's Susie J. third. JUSTICE JOHN BACK AGAIN. Resumes His Work by Releasing a Man from Jail-Cases Heard. Hon. John J. Crutchfield. Police Justice of the city of Richmond, is again at his post of duty. This statement sounds a note of warning to all sinners throughout the length and breadth of Richmond, and as they hear of it their knees knock to-gether in fear-of his dislike of law-breaking, and his determination to avenge the right and protect the helpless. Justice John has been spending a deserved and much needed vacation of just ten days in the mountains, and in his absence Squire Lonnie Graves has wielded the wand justly and well. And now the inimitable Justice comes back from Crozet and Ford's Lithia Springs, at Waynesboro', greatly improved and rested. He looks like he has taken a new and extensive lease on life. He enters again upon looks like he has taken a new and extensive lease on life. He enters again upon his battle against sin in the sense in which it is seen in the Police Court.

The first five days of his stay were spent at breeze-lashed Crozet with his family, and then he took up his habitation at Waynesboro', and he pronounces this a model place for enjoyment and a "haven of rest."

His family, which the warm weather had expanded to many parts of the State, returned with him.

ON THE BENCH YESTERDAY. Justice John was on the bench, as usual yesterday morning, and his mind had lost none of its keen insight nor yet his hand its cunning nor steadiness. As he took his seat upon the throne, Sergeant Thomas handed him a letter, which ran

Thomas handed him a letter, which ran as follows:

City Jail, September 2, 1897.

Judge Crutchfield:

Kind Sir,—Hearing that you have returned from a pleasure trip and exceedingly enjoyed yourself, I appeal to your sympathy and generosity to kindly send me my release, so that I also may go away on a pleasure trip and enjoy myself. I have been in here for some time and promise you that I will try and not be taken before you again.

Hoping you will consider my appeal at once and send my release, so that I can go away on my vacation. I am, sir, yours very sincerely.

The Justice read it, and, then looking over his glasses out of the window for a moment, said to Clerk White: "Write a release for him, Sergeant, and send it down to jail."

THE CASES HEARD.

The routine of dealing with sinners was then taken up. Willie Holmes, James Burwell, and Dan Hollman, the three little negro boys arrested by Detectives Tomlinson and Gibson, were prisoners, charged with entering the store of R. E. Firth and stealing six hams. The boys "squealed" on each other, and swore that they had sold the goods to a negro named Moses Reed, who conducts a small store on Third street between Broad and Marshall. The three little thieves were sent to the grand Jury, and Reed was sent down in default of $500 security for a year. John W. Price, a dusky policy-man, was caught working his game. Policeman Werner had a good case, so Price pleaded guilty, and was sent down for one day and fined $50. THE CASES HEARD. guilty, and was sent down for one day and fined $30.

John Williams, a negro boy tramp, was caught with a lot of cut lead pipe in his possession, and was sent down for thirty
